Jane ARCHER

Jane Archer is one of the UK's leading cruise journalists and the Daily Telegraph Travel's cruise expert. She has been sharing her experiences with Blue Horizons' readers for nine years.

Full of Eastern promise

This might be a special summer issue of Blue Horizons, but after days of looking out of my office at grey skies my thoughts have strayed to warmer climes, namely Asia and the Far East.

Why there? Partly because by the time you read this I will be enjoying plenty of sunshine on a cruise on the Mekong River in Cambodia and Vietnam, but I'm also put in mind of all things Asia by news that Voyages of Discovery will be heading back there in winter 2016/17.

I have cruised in the Far East many times and never tire of it. I love the colour, the food, the warm weather, the friendly people and the general feeling of optimism. I also love that it is so exotic and offers experiences you are not going to have anywhere else in the world.

I've visited an elephant orphanage in Sri Lanka, climbed a temple to look down on the thousands of pagodas that dot the Bagan plain in Myanmar and dined on street food at Hong Kong's Temple Street night market (plastic tables and chairs in the street but some of the best - and cheapest - Chinese food I've ever eaten!).

I've drunk Singapore Slings in the Long Bar in Raffles Hotel (definitely the most expensive drinks I have ever bought), seen the sun rise over Angkor Wat in Cambodia and crawled through the Cu Chi Tunnels outside Ho Chi Minh City where the Viet Cong lived during the war with America.

In Ho Chi Minh City itself, I'll never forget my tour on the back of scooter as my driver skilfully dodged his way past hundreds of other bikers criss-crossing their way through the traffic and weaving the wrong way around roundabouts. It was amazing to see how they would get so close to us but never touch.

Voyages of Discovery will be visiting most of these places and many more on its return to Asia. On a 16 day voyage along the coast of Vietnam in February 2017 you can cruise among the limestone karsts in Halong Bay and take a day trip to Hanoi - two experiences on my ever-growing bucket list.

Of course if you fancy a cruise in Asia there are plenty of other companies to choose from, including cultural cruise line Voyages to Antiquity, luxury brands Regent Seven Seas Cruises and Silversea, and the king of casual, aka Norwegian Cruise Line, which is also returning to the Far East and Australia in winter 2016/17, but after a gap of, wow, 15 years.

The company's Asian adventure starts in October 2016, when the 2,348 Norwegian Star sails through the Suez Canal to Dubai and then on to India, Sri Lanka and Singapore. She sails back and forth between there and Hong Kong a few times, then heads Down Under for a couple of cruises around Australia and New Zealand. A voyage from Sydney to Singapore, the Middle East and through Suez brings her back to Europe in April 2017.

Cruising down the river

One other Asian experience that was really memorable was a trip to Xian in China to see the terracotta warriors. I had read about them of course but no amount of pre-travel homework can prepare you for seeing the real thing.

There are some 8,000 life-size soldiers each with a different facial expression, and they were built more than 2,000 years ago on the orders of Emperor Qin, who wanted an army to protect him in the afterlife.

They were discovered by accident in 1974 and are now displayed standing in line in pits - warriors in one, cavalry and horses in another and officers in a third. I could have stayed there for hours.

It was one of many highlights on a cruise-and-stay holiday in China that started in Shanghai, included five nights sailing beneath the towering peaks of the three gorges on the Yangtze River, with a visit also to the Three Gorges Dam, and a couple of nights in Beijing.

It was the excellent way to get a taste of China, a fascinating country that I feel few people really understand. If it appeals, have a word with the folk at Reader Offers, as I notice they have a similar itinerary with Uniworld River Cruises next year.

And then there was Crystal

It's like London buses. You wait years for Crystal Cruises to order a new ship and then three come along at once. Oh, and two river cruise boats, one luxury yacht and a Dreamliner aircraft that will fly the world with just 60 people on board.

The yacht, MegaStar Taurus, has been sailing for Star Cruises, Crystal's sister company following its acquisition by Genting, but is being 'Crystalised', to turn it onto a posh all-suite vessel, Crystal Esprit.

It will hold just 62 passengers, have a built-in marina from where you can go waterskiing, kayaking, sailing and snorkelling, and even a two-man submarine. It will launch in December, initially island-hopping around the Seychelles before moving to the Adriatic next summer.

Crystal is not giving away anything about the new river venture or the three cruise ships, other than that they will hold around 1,000 passengers, have ice-strengthened hulls so they can cruise in the polar regions and the first will be delivered in 2018. Hopefully we won't have to wait too long to find out more.

Maritime Memories

with Nigel Lingard
(Non-Executive Director, Reader Offers Ltd)

I RECENTLY WROTE ABOUT
THE PICK-UP IN NEW ORDERS
FOR CRUISE SHIPS, AND THIS HAS CONTINUED APACE.

Luxury line Crystal Cruises, recently taken over by the Far East based Genting group, have announced a dramatic expansion, including a 64 berth luxury superyacht, a new river cruise fleet, two new 1,000 berth luxury expedition ships to be built by Germany's Lloyd Werft yards, and to cap it all a special first class 787 jet for world tours!

The long-rumoured entry of Richard Branson's Virgin group into the business has come closer, with funding promised from various investment groups; key executives appointed including the original head of Disney Cruises; and very innovative ship designs being proposed. The real deal may yet be a few years away however, as the limited number of shipyards with cruise capability are suddenly booked up by Carnival and others, so Virgin may have to wait their turn. Maybe around 2020 a project which began in 2005 will finally set sail!

One project which does seem to have bitten the dust is the Titanic replica idea mooted by Australian entrepreneur Clive Palmer. Most observers saw this as a pipe-dream; more a publicity stunt than a viable plan.

Some plans do seem to take forever, and trying to establish cruise programmes around Cuba was something I spent a lot of time involved with. The key issue was relationships with the U.S. authorities, who would blacklist any company seen to be supporting Cuba. Any ship we deployed there could not enter any American waters for the following six months, which of course hampered itinerary planning.

For one trip including Havana, some New York based cruise agents joined us by flying via Canada, then home via Jamaica. Despite not having any Cuba stamp in their passports, when they landed at JFK the immigration officer enquired politely as to how they had enjoyed their trip to Havana! No secrets anywhere in the modern world?

THERE IS A FADED
SPLENDOUR ABOUT
HAVANA, WHILST THE SMALLER PORTS AND
RURAL AREAS ARE SET
IN A PICTURESQUE
TIME WARP

A rapprochement with the U.S. is now being encouraged by President Obama, so it may be timely to visit this beautiful island before the hordes descend and McDonalds open up. There is a faded splendour about Havana, whilst the smaller ports and rural areas are set in a picturesque time warp. (See page 20-21 for the Voyages of Discovery Caribbean & Cuba cruises).

With more new ships arriving, and cruises through to mid 2017 already on sale, we should all be spoilt for choice as we plan ahead!
