5 Encounters with our new King

As a broadcaster & journalist, Jennie Bond has spent many years in the presence of Royalty. Here, our Cruise Miles® Ambassador shares her top 5 encounters with our new King.

Where White Stilettos Don't Belong

One of the first things I noticed about Prince (as he then was) Charles was that he had an eye for detail, particularly for anything mildly quirky. Way back in the 90s, I had a habit of wearing white stilettoes pretty much wherever I went. And sometimes, my job as the BBC's Royal Correspondent took me to places where white stilettoes simply did not belong. That was how I found myself stumbling uncomfortably through a field of corn stubble in New Zealand as the Prince drove by in a Land Rover. He leant casually out of the window, smiling broadly. "Ah!" he chortled. "I see you have the wrong shoes again, Miss Bond." It was the first of several good-natured jibes that Charles directed at my footwear over the many years that I have reported on him.

Well-Groomed Rats

The Royal Family rarely see life as it is for the rest of us. And that's because their presence alters our reality. The old adage about everywhere smelling of fresh paint when a royal visit takes place is sadly true. And it's not what the family wants! On a trip to India in 1992, I was travelling with Prince Charles to a slum on the outskirts of New Delhi. It turned out to be the cleanest, freshest-smelling slum you could ever encounter. Even the rats looked well-groomed. Afterwards, he turned to me and said he wished so much that he could just stop the car somewhere and march in unannounced.

A Modern-Day Hero

Our new King loves his gardens at Highgrove and is only too happy to show them off to visitors. I've been lucky enough to be invited to his home twice - to admire the grounds and to chat with Charles over a cup of tea (and one of his Duchy biscuits!). His passion for nature and his antipathy to pesticides and genetic engineering were all-consuming. He was a man way ahead of his time and, after the mockery he endured for talking to his plants and loving his trees, Charles is now a modern-day hero in the battle to protect the planet.

A Dangerously Direct Path To The Prince

A date seared in my memory is the 26th of January 1994. It was Australia Day and the start of an Antipodean tour by the Prince. In Sydney's Tumbalong Park, he was treated to a rather tedious, prize-giving ceremony. Suddenly, I heard something that sent shockwaves through my body - and made headline news around the world. The crack of a pistol ripped through the park, followed swiftly by another. At the same instant, a young man catapulted himself out of the audience and onto the stage - he seemed to be flying through the air on a dangerously direct path to the Prince. In a split second, a sleepy afternoon ceremony in the park had been transformed into a real-life drama. I remember thinking out loud that we were witnessing an assassination attempt on the Prince of Wales. The stage was now a seething mass of police and security, the gunman was pinned to the floor, and the Prince, looking bewildered rather than frightened, was shielded by his protection officer, who had unceremoniously shoved him to the side. Gradually, we learned that this had not been any kind of assassination attempt, the gun was no more than a starting pistol and the "assassin" was a student intent on drawing attention to the plight of Cambodian boat people. Nevertheless, it was a dramatic story and one that kept me awake and working flat out for the next 36 hours.

A Contented King

I was at Windsor on the 9th of April 2005 to report on the wedding of our new King to the woman he had loved for more than 30 years, Camilla Parker Bowles. As I watched them leaving Windsor's Guildhall, looking rather anxious about the reception they might get from the crowds, I was as relieved as they were to hear the cheers and good wishes from those around me. I knew and liked Diana, Princess of Wales, but I saw first-hand how unhappy the so-called fairytale royal marriage had become. I know and like Camilla, too. She is down-to-earth, warm, funny and infinitely patient.

Finally, on that day in Windsor 18 years ago, Charles had his darling wife at his side. She has been there ever since - and he is a much better man, and a far more contented King, because of her.

JENNIE BOND: MY TOP ROYAL DESTINATIONS

Cruise Miles® Ambassador Jennie Bond was the BBC's Royal Correspondent for more than a decade. During that time, she was lucky enough to travel the world on a number of Royal tours. From South Africa to New Zealand, here, Jennie shares her top 5 destinations:

1. CANADA

"You have to fly over Canada to get an idea of just how vast a country it is. I've travelled from coast to coast with royalty and we often seemed to spend more time in the air than on the ground. It's on my bucket list to return one day to explore this mighty land in more detail. I remember Vancouver as a city of majestic beauty, and Iqaluit, up towards the Arctic Circle, as one of the strangest places I have ever visited."

"We all enjoy a knees-up and the Coronation is going to be a huge nationwide party, with an extra Bank Holiday thrown in so we can recover! Most of us have never seen a Coronation, which will make the day a unique experience, shared throughout the country. For King Charles, it will be a day of solemnity and reflection as he publicly takes on the responsibilities of monarch. He's already made a steady start to his reign, and we can expect hundreds of thousands of people to line the streets of London to cheer him on his way."

Jennie Bond, former Royal correspondent and ROL Cruise Ambassador

2. THE FALKLAND ISLANDS

"I shall never forget the wild beauty of the Falkland Islands. I was there with Prince Charles after a rather busy visit to Argentina and Uruguay. There is a clarity of light in the Falklands which is truly special. We were also lucky enough to be flown to Sea Lion Island, where the Prince wanted to see the elephant seals which often inhabit the remote beaches there. We were lucky, there were at least 20 of them, all busy doing what elephant seals do - which is to fart and belch their way through life! It was the cause of great hilarity both for the Prince and his merry band of media alike. Even if you don't get to that tiny island, the Falklands is a fascinating place to visit."

3. SOUTH AFRICA

"Travelling with royalty was one of the perks of being the BBC's Royal Correspondent for so many years. And I went around the world with them several times! One of my favourite destinations was South Africa. I was there with Princes Charles and Harry shortly after the death of Princess Diana. It was obviously a very difficult time for such a young boy, but his father took him under his wing. In Johannesburg, the two Princes met the Spice Girls, which was a thrill for young Harry, at least! From there, we flew north to a small Zulu settlement called Dukuduku, where Charles was served a very strange concoction of the local brew. Africa has always excited me; it is so vast and full of promise and adventure. Go if you can!"

5. NEW ZEALAND

"Another country I would love to return to one day is New Zealand. I was there with Prince Charles on what seemed like a whistlestop tour, 30 years ago. No one could ever tire of witnessing the Maori greetings offered to the Prince or of the stunning and varied scenery. For me, it's all a bit of a blur, not because of the passage of time but because Royal tours are so fast and frantic. The world, though, is getting smaller and smaller and New Zealand is now more accessible to the holiday market than ever. A top destination, if you can make it!"

4. AUSTRALIA

"I've been lucky enough to visit Australia several times. But it was with Prince Charles that we travelled to some of the remotest places. A great destination is Fraser Island, off the coast of Brisbane. It is said to be the largest sand island in the world. The band of travelling reporters and cameramen were flown there in small planes for a welcome day off in the middle of a very busy and lengthy tour. We stayed in the same hotel as the Prince, which was something he came to regret. The rat pack, as we were known, decided to let our hair down, have a karaoke competition and then enjoy a rowdy, starlit jacuzzi under the tropical skies. The next morning, a bleary-eyed Prince chastised us saying, "Was that you lot making that goddam awful noise last night? I couldn't sleep a wink!"

DISCOVER THE WONDERS OF JAPAN IN CHERRY BLOSSOM

Each year Japan transforms into a pink Arcadia as cherry trees (Sakura) are awash with their seasonal bloom. This natural marvel is so well followed in Japan, it even makes the daily weather report. Here are our top spots for witnessing the flourishing blossoms at this magical time of year:

Yoyogi Park, Tokyo
With around 700 cherry trees, Yoyogi Park is one of Tokyo's most popular places for the long-standing tradition of Hanami (cherry blossom viewing party with picnic).

Omura Park, Nagasaki
Omura Park hosts over 20 varieties of cherry blossom including Omura Zakura, a rare variety due to its appearance that's similar to a rose.

Hirosaki Park (near Aomori)
As well as the beautiful Hirosaki Castle, spacious Hirosaki Park is home to approximately 2,600 cherry trees of 50 different varieties, including one 134-year-old Yoshino cherry tree.

IN THE FOOTSTEPS OF The new King

For reasons too complicated to explain, I found myself in the German town of Coburg last December. It's a pretty place and barely 40 minutes' drive from the River Main, but you can't visit it on any cruises, rivers or otherwise (which is a shame, but that is another story).

So why am I telling you this? As some might guess from the name, this was the family seat of Albert, the Saxe-Coburg prince who married Queen Victoria and whose great, great, great grandson King Charles III is about to be crowned in Westminster Abbey.

It got me thinking it would be fun to see how many places you can visit on a cruise that have a connection with the king. Given his family's roots, Germany seems a good place to start - especially the capital, Berlin, which had the honour of hosting the King and Queen on their first overseas state visit.

It might be an unlikely candidate given it is a long way from the sea, but you can visit on a cruise. Oceania Cruises' Baltic voyages this summer have tours from the seaside town of Warnemunde. It's a great introduction to the city that was once the symbol of a divided Europe.

There's no Berlin on APT's Magnificent Europe river cruise from Amsterdam to Budapest but you see a lot of Germany (there are calls into nine German towns and cities alone) and get bonus points for Amsterdam and Budapest, which the king visited in September 1984 and May 2000 respectively.

Delve into Scandinavia's Viking history on Fred Olsen Cruise Lines' voyage from Rosyth in August and you'll not only be following in the footsteps of Charles on a call into Oslo (he was there in March 2012 as part of a grand tour of Scandinavia) but sailing on Balmoral, a ship

Jane ARCHER

Jane Archer is one of the UK's leading cruise journalists and cruise expert for the Daily Telegraph. She has been sharing her experiences with Blue Horizons' readers for the past 14 years.

named after his Scottish castle. The royal tour also stopped in Bergen, where Hurtigruten's Norwegian coastal voyages start and end. Do one of those and that's another on the list.

For a right royal bonanza, a 22-day Venice to Istanbul cruise with Oceania in October has a day in Athens, three in Israel and an overnight in Istanbul. In Athens in May 2018, King Charles

III laid a wreath at the Memorial of the Unknown Soldier; in Israel in January 2020 he visited the tomb of his grandmother, Princess Alice of Greece and Denmark, on the Mount of Olives in Jerusalem; from Istanbul, in 2015 he visited Gallipoli for the centenary of the WWI landings.

The king has certainly stacked up the Air Miles, often with barely a break. He visited the pyramids and Sphinx in Cairo in November 2021 (which you can do on Uniworld River Cruises' Splendors of Egypt and the Nile river cruise) and soon after was in Barbados, to oversee the moment the Caribbean island switched from having the Queen as head of state to becoming a republic. You can have two days in Barbados on 14-night voyages round-trip from Antigua on P&O Cruises' new ship, Arvia, this winter.

Australia has been a Royal tour favourite over the years, most memorably in March and April 1983, when Charles visited with a nine-month old Prince William and visited Sydney, Hobart in Tasmania, Adelaide, Melbourne and Perth - all places Holland America Line's Westerdam is calling into on an epic circumnavigation of Australia in November 2024 (there are also calls into Brisbane and Darwin, and even a detour to Indonesia, to the island home of the Komodo dragons).

The Prince of Wales was in Tokyo in November 1990 to attend Emperor Akihito's accession to the Japanese throne and in New York in March 1997 to visit UN headquarters - places you can visit respectively with Princess Cruises and Cunard. He also visited Doha before Qatar made a name for itself as host of the FIFA World Cup. I was there last year and it is an interesting place, with amazing architecture and fun dune-bashing tours in the desert. You can find out more by adding a few days in Doha to the start or end of Silversea cruises from the city in late 2024.

Its easy to embark on your own grand tour with one of the many cruises on offer in this edition of Blue Horizons!

Sydney is a cosmopolitan, multicultural city surrounded by golden sand beaches, World Heritage areas, lush national parks and acclaimed wine regions. YOUR TWO-NIGHT 5★ HOTEL STAY IN BALI‡

Beautiful Bali is everything you imagine it will be; humbling temples, tranquil lakes, traditional villages, idyllic sands and thriving paddy fields. 'Tis but a mere Trifle

If you are in need of some inspiration to celebrate the coronation in the best way possible, with food of course, then look no further than Adam Handling's Strawberry and Ginger Trifle! A celebrated Michelin Star Chef, Adam has featured on MasterChef: The Professionals and has a number of impressive awards under his belt, including Scottish Chef of the Year.

Adam Handling's Strawberry and Ginger Trifle

Serves 8

For the yorkshire parkin

- 150g golden syrup
- 150g unsalted butter
- 40g black treacle
- 150g soft brown sugar
- 150g self-raising flour
- 115g oats 2 whole eggs 8g ginger, ground
- 1.5 tsp nutmeg, ground
- 1.5 tsp mixed spice

Melt the butter, syrups and brown sugar in a saucepan. Place all the dry ingredients into a mixer, on a low speed, and combine them. Add the wet ingredients and mix until incorporated. Finish with the eggs and beat for 5 minutes, until smooth and pale. Bake in a lined 900g loaf tin, at 160°C, for 25 minutes.

For the strawberry jelly

- 350g frozen strawberries, defrosted and blended
- 125g caster sugar
- 6 gelatine leaves

Soften the gelatine in a bowl of cold water and squeeze to remove all the water. Warm the blended strawberries in a saucepan with the sugar and the gelatine. Pour through a fine-mesh sieve or coffee filter, to make the liquid become clear.

For the ginger custard

- 8 egg yolks
- 130g caster sugar
- 100g plain flour
- 500ml whole milk
- 1tsp ginger, ground

Place the milk and ginger into a saucepan and heat until just before it reaches the boil. Whisk the egg yolks and the sugar together, add the flour and then add the milk. Pour into a saucepan, cook on a low heat and whisk for 5 minutes until the custard thickens. Chill down in a tray and cover with greaseproof paper, to cool.

For the cream

- 300g double cream, cold
- 50g icing sugar
- 1 vanilla pod, scraped

Add the icing sugar and vanilla seeds to the cream. Whip the cream to stiff peaks, then transfer to a piping bag for serving.

For serving

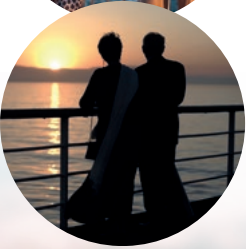

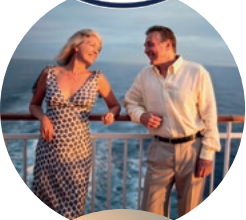

- 150g frozen strawberries, defrosted and chopped
- Nuts, chopped

Dice the Parkin into chunks and add it to the bottom of the glass. Place a few of the defrosted strawberries on top. Pour the strawberry jelly into the glass, over the defrosted strawberries and diced Parkin, and transfer to the fridge, to set. Spoon a layer of ginger custard onto the top of the jelly. Pipe dots of the cream on top, until the whole glass is covered. Garnish with the chopped nuts.
