Cool BRITANNIA

Jane Archer is one of the UK's leading cruise journalists and cruise expert for the Daily Telegraph. She has been sharing her experiences with Blue Horizons' readers for the past 18 years.

Forget airports and hanging around for flights. These days it's cool to cruise from the UK. So cool, in fact, that almost as many Brits sail from our shores as take a fly-cruise. Not bad considering just one-third of cruising Brits sailed from the UK in 2004.

Why the change? Well for one thing it is so easy. You don't have to worry about those flight delays or cancellations that have become all too common, and there is no limit to how much luggage you can take. You simply load up the car, drive to the port, hand your bags over to the crew to be delivered to your cabin and check in. What bliss! Two hours after arriving, you'll have found your room, explored the ship and be enjoying the first cocktail of the holiday. And that's no exaggeration. I know, because I have done it.

With cruises from ports all around the UK including Portsmouth, Liverpool and Newcastle, you don't always have to drive to Southampton either, although as the busiest port, it does have the most choice.

If you sailed from the UK 30 years ago chances are you'd be on a cruise ship that was British through and through, with set dining, strict formal nights and roast beef and Yorkshire pud on the menu every Sunday.

Not any more. Over the past 20 years or so, American and European cruise lines have muscled in on the UK act with ships that offer a more laid-back style of holiday to appeal to a younger generation.

British lines P&O Cruises, Fred. Olsen Cruise Lines and Ambassador Cruise Lines are still hugely popular with their mainly UK customer base, but even they have moved with the times, offering speciality restaurants alongside the main dining room, while also relaxing dress codes. Even Cunard, the king of formal, has rowed back on the number of dressy evenings scheduled on each cruise.

Over-50s favourite Saga, meanwhile, has taken a leaf out of the luxury lines' book and dismissed allocated dining altogether. Now you can turn up and eat when you feel peckish, sitting as a couple or joining friends. It's your holiday, your choice.

So far so British but just look at the other choices you've got. Royal Caribbean International and Celebrity Cruises offer holidays on larger family-friendly ships with a lively American vibe that are a destination in themselves. What with a multitude of restaurants, goodness knows how many bars, water slides that promise to take your breath away and kids' clubs that keep the children entertained with fun games and activities, you don't really need to get off.

Hop on Norwegian Cruise Line's Iceland adventure on Norwegian Prima in September next year and you can speed around a go-kart track on the Atlantic one day and dip in geothermal waters in Reykjavik's Blue Lagoon the next. Best of all, you can do all that sailing out and back from Southampton. No flights, no bother.

Princess Cruises' American-style Sky Princess is back in the UK next summer with its swanky suites and lively piazza, you can find out why Oceania Cruises is a foodie favourite on various sailings from Southampton or treat yourself to an ultra-luxury voyage from Dover with Seabourn that comes with champagne on tap. New in summer 2025, Holland America Line joins the UK's no-fly cruise club with 10 sailings round-trip from Dover on Nieuw Statendam.

Between them these lines offer cruises to the Mediterranean and Baltic, the Norwegian fjords, Iceland, Greenland and Canary Islands, all without setting foot in an airport. You can go in search of the Northern Lights in Norway and if time is on your side, island-hopping in the Caribbean, circumnavigating South America, even sailing around the world. If adventure is calling, Silversea has a raft of new no-fly expedition cruises next summer that take passengers bird-spotting and hiking around the UK.

Talk about choice and variety and right on our doorstep too. I wonder how long it will be before history goes full circle and more Brits cruise from the UK than fly. Watch this space, as they say.

STAFF STORIES: SAILING THE FJORDS WITH HURTIGRUTEN

Recently ROL Cruise team member Lia journeyed through Norway's Arctic splendour...

Welcome back, Lia! You recently sailed Norway on board Hurtigruten's MS Nordnorge. What was the on board experience like?

The staff on MS Nordnorge were amazing - nothing was too much trouble for them! They were very welcoming and friendly at all times. The on board experience team were fantastic, they gave in-depth briefings about what was going on the following day so we were always kept informed, didn't miss anything and knew what to expect.

How does Hurtigruten differ from other cruise lines?

Hurtigruten is all about the destination. It was great to see so many different ports of call during such a short voyage.

Also, the shore excursions available gave us a real insight into each port. We were lucky enough to participate in two excursions - my favourite was the famous Atlantic Road which really captured how beautiful Norway's scenery is.

Can you tell us a bit more about your itinerary?

Our itinerary was jam-packed - we stopped at a variety of ports each day. Some days we called at eight ports! While we were not able to disembark at every port due to limited timings, it was still great to be able to sail in and see the beautiful scenery.

Which was your favourite port and why?

Tromsø was my favourite port. We docked here just before midnight. It was great to be able to get off and experience the Midnight Sun. Still being able to fully appreciate what the city had to offer at that time of night was amazing and also very surreal.

Lastly, do you have any top tips for customers sailing on the same itinerary?

Download the Hurtigruten app! The app gives you the itinerary for each day, the menu and port timings. It is only available to use while on board but can be downloaded in advance.

Another thing I'd recommend is to keep announcements on while in your cabin. We were notified of several whale sightings while on board which gave us the opportunity to head out on deck and see.

*Some cabins have limited / no views. Please note cabins can be based on fixed double or twin bed configurations. Hurtigruten and Reader Offers Limited Package Holiday booking conditions apply. Please see back for full terms and conditions.
